EWA BATHELIER

Ewa Bathelier was born in Warsaw, Poland, graduated from medicine school and later was introduced to her artistic career. Her paintings have been displayed in many galleries around the world. As a scenographer, she made the stage and costume design for Beckett and Pinget's plays in Berlin as well as other cities around Europe. She is also associated with poetic publishers in Poland who go by the name "Kwartalnik Artystyczny." With this influence at the palms of her career she has become imbued with appropriate emotions for her professional journey.

Ewa Bathelier's experience as a costume and set designer in the theater is clearly reflected in her signature acrylic paintings. Having spent her adult life in France, the artist focuses on one of the country's most famous cultural exports—ballet, specifically ballet attire. Light, free-floating, and symbolic, the primavera dresses, leotards, and tutus she depicts are thrown into relief by their monochrome backgrounds, though the garments conspicuously lack the bodies that are meant to inhabit them.

Ewa's works have been exhibited in many places both around the world. Her obsession with dresses for many years has made her create masterpieces that look dreamy and ethereal. They form an energetic, sensual and unwavering artistry. She acts as a medium adorning the inner and intimate passion for the dresses that create a whole new perspective on how she has made her scenography experience success.

Her work graces many galleries and leaves most of her fan fascinated by her light touch on the patterns and variety of the subtle dresses she comes up with. The dresses have different texture alongside the obscured silhouette meshed in an altogether physical work, who to some Ewa's paintings remind us of the perfect beauty of the black swan.
